College targets for improving outcomes for Year 7 English and Maths catch-up students

All students who follow the Ignite (literacy and numeracy) programme in Years 7 make accelerated progress that brings them in line with expected progress for their age.

NB. This plan should be linked to our Pupil Premium plan where student meet both criteria.

Review and analysis of impact September 2018:

There was clear evidence of the impact of the Ignite literacy and numeracy programme in this academic year. However, benchmarking it against national standards is a challenge. We have benchmarked progress against internal measures, where students are placed into one of four bands based on their current attainment.

At the start of the programme, the college deemed 21 students to not be 'secondary ready'. This meant that these 21 students fell into our 'Emerging' band, which is band 4 out of 4. Our aspiration is for all students to be at least in the next band up, 'Developing' which would indicate that they are on a flightpath that will secure them at least a GCSE Grade 1-3.

At the end of the academic year, 17 students were deemed to have progressed to be 'Developing.' In addition to this, the average progress of the students who were part of the Ignite programme was positive at +0.82.

Within the Ignite cohort 91% of students improved their spelling age by at least 12 months and 50% improved their reading age by at least 12 months.

In addition to this 74% of students improved their spelling age by at least 24 months and 21% improved their reading age by at least 12 months. National benchmarks suggest that the average reading age improvement is 3 months over a 22-week period and the majority of our students exceeded this.

Whilst not measurable in terms of progress, the feedback from both the students and their parents/carers in terms of the positive impact on self-confidence and self-esteem was over-whelmingly positive with 100% indicating that the Ignite programme had made a positive difference.
